Abstract. Tourism is the process of people traveling from one place to another, mainly for recreation, sightseeing, cultural exploration, or other purposes. Tourism, as an economic activity, plays an important role in many countries and creates jobs in various sectors (transport, hotel business, catering, etc.).

Keywords: tourism, economic growth, tourists, investment, service sector, infrastructure, culture and heritage, sustainable development.

There is a close link between tourism and economic growth. Tourism is one of the important sectors of economic activity, and it is a source of income for many countries. The following are the main links between tourism and economic growth. bottom:

1. Revenue generation: Tourism generates foreign exchange, which increases the overall revenue of the country. It contributes significantly to the economy through tourism spending, hotel services, restaurants, transportation, and other services.
2. Job creation: There will be a lot of jobs in the tourism sector. Hotels, restaurants, travel agencies and other service organizations will create new jobs, which will increase employment.
3. Socio-economic development: Tourism can lead to development not only in the economy but also in social areas; for example, by bringing different cultures closer together.

Economic Impact of Tourism: Commentary Tourism can make a significant contribution to the local economy. The arrival of tourists leads to the development of restaurants, hotels, shops and other service sectors. This creates new jobs and increases the income of local residents.

Diversification of tourism products: Attention should be paid not only to historical or natural sites, but also to new areas such as wellness, ecological or gastronomic tourism.

Investments: With investments in the tourism sector, new projects can be implemented, which will accelerate economic growth.

Service sector: Hotels, restaurants and other service sectors are the main components of tourism. Improving their quality ensures tourist satisfaction.

Infrastructure: Transport infrastructure (roads, airports) plays an important role in supporting tourism, as convenient transportation attracts tourists.

Culture and Heritage: Tourism increases interest in cultural and historical heritage, which helps to preserve and develop them.

Sustainable development: Sustainable tourism practices can protect the environment and support local communities. This allows the benefits of tourism to be sustained in the long term. Overall, these areas are closely linked, complementing each other, and ensure sustainable development.

The development of the tourism industry is important in accelerating economic growth. The advantages and challenges of this process are as follows:

Advantages:

1. Job Creation: The tourism sector provides many jobs, which helps to create employment and support the local economy.
2. Development of the local economy: Tourism increases demand for local products and services, which stimulates entrepreneurship and supports local producers.
3. Foreign exchange earnings: Spending by foreign tourists can strengthen a country's currency, leading to economic stability.
4. Improved infrastructure: Tourism leads to the development of quality infrastructure (roads, airports, hotels), which has a positive impact on other sectors.
5. Preservation of culture and heritage: Through tourism, there is an increased interest in preserving national culture and historical heritage, which helps to pass them on to future generations.

Problems:

1. Environmental damage: Tourism intensity can have negative impacts on the environment, such as depletion of natural resources or pollution.
2. Social conflicts: Social conflicts can arise between tourists and local residents, as offering services that meet the needs and demands of tourists can sometimes conflict with the interests of local residents .
3. Legislation and governance issues: Lack of sufficient oversight in the legislative process can lead to problems in tourism management (e.g. illegal tourism activities).
4. Borrowing Risks: There may be a high level of borrowing risk when raising finance for large tourism projects.
5. Seasonal instability: Due to the seasonal nature of tourism, it can lead to instability in relation to other sectors of the economy - for example, a decrease in jobs as a result of low tourism in winter.

Considering these advantages and challenges, it is crucial to develop a sustainable approach and strategies for tourism development.

Impact of Economic Growth on Tourism: - Improved infrastructure: Economic growth improves transportation and communication systems, which creates favorable conditions for tourism.

- Opening of new destinations: Economic stability creates new opportunities to attract tourists.
- Advertising and Marketing: A growing economy allows for more investment in tourism marketing. Sustainable Development It is important to ensure sustainability in the use of tourism. This:
- Reducing environmental impact;
- Help preserve local culture and traditions;
- Protecting the interests of local populations. Global Concerns: Tourism can also be linked to global issues:
- Risks such as pandemics or natural disasters can sharply reduce the tourism sector.
- Climate change can also negatively affect tourism activities.

Conclusion. Tourism has a positive impact not only on the economy, but also on intercultural relations. It brings people closer together, increases understanding between different peoples, and develops social ties on a global scale. In general, tourism is an integral part of human life, it provides many opportunities and serves socio-economic development worldwide. Although there are opportunities to accelerate economic growth through the development of the tourism industry, this process also poses a number of problems. For the successful development of this sector of the economy, it is necessary to pay attention to environmental protection, preserve local culture, and adhere to the principles of sustainable development. Thus, the right strategies must be developed so that the role of the tourism sector in the economy is positive. In conclusion, tourism and economic growth are mutually reinforcing processes, and strategic planning is very important for their successful development!
