The main issues in the works of Utkir Hashimov are humanity, kindness, love, and hope. His stories and novels talk about the mental state of a person, his inner world, self-confidence, and love of life.

Hashimov's literary approach shows not only the life of an individual person, but also moral issues in society. In his works, he deeply describes the inner experiences, desires, and processes of self-awareness of a person. This gives his works great philosophical content and deep meaning. Studying the works of Utkir Hashimov not only contributes to the development of Uzbek literature, but also allows us to discover new literary approaches to depicting humanity, kindness and love.

This article analyzes how humanity and kindness are depicted in the works of Utkir Hashimov. In his works, the writer introduces a person to his highest moral values, deeply studying the bright and dark sides of his inner world. Through this, he gives his reader not only aesthetic pleasure, but also spiritual nourishment. The works of Utkir Hashimov not only give the reader artistic pleasure, but also promote the appreciation of humanity and kindness, the application of these values in his life. His literary heritage, while maintaining its significance in modern literature, continues to cherish and glorify the highest qualities of a person - kindness, love and humanity.

Main part: Utkir Hashimov is one of the most distinguished representatives of Uzbek literature, in whose works the inner world of man, moral values, and love occupy a special place. The novels and stories he wrote are very powerful in describing the natural experiences, feelings of man, his place in society, and his attitude towards himself. Reflecting the high ideals of humanity, love, and harmony in his works, Hashimov examines the social, moral, and spiritual problems of society.

Humanity means not only the specific rules of living, but also the understanding of the spiritual and moral qualities of each person. In the works of Utkir Hashimov, the striving for goodness, hard work, and a positive outlook on life come first. In his works, he describes the inner world of man, his spiritual quest, and thereby shows humanity as a way for every person to achieve moral and spiritual goodness. For example, his story "Lie" shows the main character's internal struggle, the process of realizing his mistakes and learning from them. Through this story, the writer reflects the processes of learning from human mistakes, fighting against them, understanding and improving himself. Through such works, Hashimov shows his reader that humanity is measured not only by external actions, but also by the internal, spiritual state.

In the works of Utkir Hashimov, kindness and love are seen as extremely important themes. In the works of Hashimov, kindness is depicted as a force that ensures the existence of humanity. Kindness and love are reflected not only in personal relationships, but also in social relations in society.

For example, in his work "Such is Life", the love of the main characters for each other, their mutual compromise and understanding of the complexity of life play an important role. In his work, Hashimov shows that only on the basis of mutual love and affection can people make the right decisions regarding social and moral issues. By broadly covering the themes of love and affection, Hashimov shows humanity and love for life in literature as an important means of changing society.

In Hashimov's works, a person's inner experiences and his mental state usually play a large role. In all his works, he aims to depict the inner turmoil of a person - that is, the truth that lives in his soul, his searches and feelings. The goal is not only to show a social problem, but also to reflect a person's self-awareness, his inner state, and his attitude to life. For example, in the work "Big Heart", the main character's views on his life, the process of self-awareness and recognition of his mistakes are very deeply described. In his work, Hashimov very convincingly depicts the inner struggle, experiences, sorrows, and hopes. Through this work, the writer describes the spiritual turmoil of a person, how he responds to positive or negative situations.

In the works of Utkir Hashimov, the style of expressing high moral ideas and human feelings plays an important role. The style of expressing this is the force that encourages the reader to goodness, sincerity, and self-recognition. Although Hashimov's style is simple and understandable, his works contain deep meaning and thought. His writing style encourages the reader to ask some complex questions and helps to expand his thoughts. Through the literary style, Hashimov reflects the highest level of love and humanity. Works written in this style affect the reader's inner world, directing him towards goodness and spirituality. This gives his works a unique style and a positive outlook on life.
