Abstract: In the article, the role of spiritual needs in the life of society, the classification of the system of needs, a number of successful scientific researches have been carried out on the socio-philosophical and cultural factors of the development of spiritual needs.

Keywords: need, spiritual need, worldview, society, person, material need, technology, spiritual life, production.

Human life and its development are very complex, multifaceted and full of complicated problems. Because it is necessary for a person to conduct politics, engage in art, literature, science, participate in educational processes, eat food, dress up and satisfy other material needs before cultural recreation. Needs and interests in life are the driving force of human creativity. Human creative activity is manifested in two directions: material production and spiritual production. Spiritual needs are more diverse and complex than material ones.

The activity of spiritual production includes the creation of spiritual wealth and the assimilation and consumption of spiritual wealth, as well as the education of a generation capable of mastering and developing these wealth. One of the important signs of spiritual production or mental work, creativity is that human spiritual activity is focused primarily on rational, practical and theoretical knowledge of existence, and when necessary on intuitive-emotional, heuristic knowledge, discovery. This process is the process of satisfying the spiritual needs of a person through the creation of ideas, knowledge, theories, artistic images and other spiritual values, along with the growth and development of a person's spiritual consciousness and outlook.

Spiritual needs develop ahead of material needs. "Spiritual needs are a concept that expresses the desire of the state, society and the individual to satisfy their spiritual demands, interests and needs in addition to material needs in a stable life", says the explanatory dictionary of the main concepts of spirituality. Spiritual needs religious, political, moral, scientific, ethical, religious, legal and b in other directions sure manifestation will be Failure to satisfy spiritual needs can lead to the emergence of various destructive ideas in the stable life of the society, and in some cases, it can pose a serious threat to the life of the state and society. Therefore, many ideological and social problems can be eliminated by gradually satisfying the demands and interests expressed in the form of spiritual needs.

The satisfaction of spiritual needs is the reason for the rise of the life of the individual and the society, and directs it to development. Because in the essence of spiritual needs, first of all, things and events, interests and aspirations the most important internal interconnections, their legal relationship are expressed. The material and social requirements of the people with developed spiritual and cultural needs, the requirements for comfortable and free living, science and new advanced technologies will also be high. A nation with a developed economy will have a higher cultural level and opportunities to improve spirituality, science, literature and art, living culture. These, in turn, strengthen the possibility of developing democratic freedoms and civil society. It is easier for people living in a society that is independent, free from danger (satisfaction of their need for security) to use their creativity and achieve progress. Spiritual needs are visible in the form of manifestation of aspects, connections, features that make up these things and events. In its essence, a person's desire for knowledge, perfection, self-expression and understanding by following high ideals emerges. Spiritual needs indicate the level of development of society, moral ideals, the nature of the orientation of goals and interests. In its essence, it has gathered the potential of creativity, creativity and creativity, and the satisfaction of spiritual needs is a means for the development of society, social, economic and political improvement.

Spiritual needs are considered high needs and can be divided into several groups:

- the need for creativity and hard work. The need for work is formed on the basis of functional needs, without which the normal development of the human body is impossible. Functional needs do not automatically and directly become labor needs. The need for work arises when this situation leads to the satisfaction of other needs, including the need for knowledge, as a manifestation of labor activity. For example, a carpenter cannot create a piece without knowing the techniques of woodworking. Most people taste and enjoy the pleasure of creativity through their work. This is the transformation of material needs into spiritual needs.
- identity ( national to realize the self ). Man has been need for the most difficult, complicated problem identity understanding and is to appreciate. Himself a person who understands of course own value knows, like this only in people others appreciate feeling too strong will be Realizing one 's identity, first of all, means knowing one's lineage, one's place in life and society, one's rights, responsibilities, and civic duty.

Realization of national identity is a person's deep understanding of what opportunities he has and the ability to mobilize himself to bring them to the surface in order to ensure the prospects of the society and the Motherland.

- the need to know, acquire knowledge, acquire knowledge and use it in the process of practical activity. Cognition is the process of perception of the world in the human mind. Knowledge is the product and result of knowledge, and acquiring any profession can only be achieved through knowledge. Knowing and getting knowledge is a spiritual need, a vital necessity, unique to a human being. A spiritually healthy person has a constant need to acquire knowledge and various information.
- the need to have a moral culture and demonstrate them in behavior. Ethical needs express a person's motivation for productive activity, regulation of interaction with people, family life, clear determination of the place of behavior in life, society, nature and, in general, self-relation.
- religious need. Religion, like morality, is one of the primary foundations of spirituality and forms of existence. Religion, together with philosophy, constitutes the conceptual basis and content of faith, worldview, and therefore, spirituality. Philosophy is the scientific-rational basis of belief, worldview, scientific-logical content. Religion, on the other hand, is more of an emotional, spiritual basis of belief and a mystical content.
- the need to create and realize aesthetic-artistic and other aesthetic values. Aesthetic education is spiritual education one of the important directions and forms. It nurtures the human desire for beauty, to recreate the world "according to the laws of beauty". One of the essential characteristics of a person is that he is a creature whose material and spiritual needs rise. Aesthetic needs - striving for harmony, harmony, symmetry, trying to make things comfortable and beautiful, forming a desire to create beauty by imitating nature, dancing, singing, singing, painting and so on.
- the need to create. Creativity is a constructive activity of a person aimed at creating something new. In the process of creation, the emotional (emotional perception, perception, imagination, emotion, passion, etc.), rational (intellect, understanding, insight, attention, memory) and non-rational (intuition, spiritual guidance, etc.) elements of the human psyche are mutually active. in relation to which the researcher's knowledge, skills, experience and talent are shown. Creation is also a form of creativity, the activity of creating spiritual products. Writers, poets, painters, sculptors, painters, singers, dancers, directors and other creative people create their products taking into account the "needs of the times".

- the need for vocational training. One of the most important things for a person is to acquire a profession. To understand the essence of anything, to know the good and bad sides of events in the world, to correctly understand the value and worth of people, to properly organize a family's prosperous life, to learn a trade in order to become a perfect person in every way, to be skilled is a necessary need for a person.

Together with the external feelings of a person, which are formed under the influence of the external environment, and the social feelings that mature due to education: responsibility, humanity, love for people, morality, and aesthetic taste, a person forms his spiritual needs.

Thinking and creative imagination, like feelings, are the main criteria that form spiritual needs. Because with the help of creative imagination, people create a foundation for thoughts, views, ideas, theories. For example, famous works of art, which first appeared as ideas in the creative imagination of artists, poets, musicians, etc., later become a source that satisfies people's spiritual needs.

In conclusion, the spiritual needs of a person are manifested in many ways depending on the level of spiritual and material development of society. A person's spiritual need creates spiritual interest, which is manifested in the process of personal activity, and as a result, spiritual value arises. Spiritual value, in turn, is the basis for the decision of higher spiritual needs. Spiritual of development this rotation period continuously continue is enough
